SPORT SHORTS

Gord Christo

Most days, you could find him in his favourite place, the arena of his delight, the Don Sheperdson Memorial Arena.

Even though he had retired from skate sharpening, Gord Christo never retired from his love of hockey and arena life.

I was shocked when I heard Gord Christo had passed away.

I send my deepest condolences to his family and friends.

Gord was the skate sharpener at the Don Sheperdson Memorial Arena for 40 years.

And I looked for him when I entered the arena if I was covering a hockey event there.

He took time out of his day to talk with me and I appreciated that.

We talked about his family, skate sharpening, recreation and even Cobalt politics.

He was astute in all of those areas, but most astute when it came to his family.

He was someone who was extremely proud of his children and grandchildren.

In fact, most of our conversations centered on what Taylor Dupuis was doing in the world of journalism at Ryerson University or how Siobhan Christo was accomplishing great things with the Ontario Provincial Police.

Sue Nielsen

He spoke lovingly about all his grandchildren at one time or another.

We talked hockey of course, recreation and the history of sport in the region.

Gord was proud of the fact that his family spawned four generations of New Liskeard Cub players.

When he retired from skate sharpening he still spent time at the rink watching hockey. It didn't matter who was playing, he just wanted to be at the rink it seemed where he spent a chunk of his lifetime.

Gord was a straight shooter, a no-nonsense guy who loved the game and people.

He will be missed. I will miss him. I hope the City names something after him because he certainly deserves it.

BUSY IS OVERRATED

To be a modern Canadian child is to stare at a screen for a third of your day and the rest of the time run from organized activity to organized activity.

Whew!

With any luck sleep will come sometime in all that busyness.

Children are being organized right out of their childhoods and this is causing physical and emotional problems.

I was speaking with a young girl, probably 10 years of age, at a local sporting event recently.

She listed all the sporting activities she was involved in and talked about dance and music classes and at the end of it she gave a big sigh.

I could tell she was overwhelmed by the way she was talking.

Children need time to play, to step back from the busy schedules to stare at the clouds or play in the mud with no goal in mind.

A fair question to ask is: are parents putting their children in activities because the child wants to join or because they want the child to join?

We aren't perfect and neither are our kids.

WILDLIFE BIOLOGIST

I wanted to give a shout out to wildlife biologist Greg Dunn who contacted me about

INFLATED ICE

Eleven-year-old Kael Rivard, in the foreground, and Layne Morlock, 10, tried their luck at the Ontario Minor Hockey Association booth, where an inflatable took the place of ice to make a mini hockey rink. The exhibition was one of the many displays at the Don Sheperdson Memorial Arena during the 100th anniversary celebrations for the Northern Ontario Hockey Association May 4. (Staff photo by Diane Johnston) the work he had done banding Sandhill cranes on Manitoulin Island.

Greg mentioned they installed tracking devices on the big birds to study their migration habits and other notables.

Greg is living back in the region now and, like myself, he travels around viewing wildlife in their natural habitats.

Thanks Greg for your input.
