

A CHRISTMAS WISH

The Christmas season is upon us and Santa Claus has been making his rounds to visit children to introduce them to the magic of Christmas. Lucas Godmaire, 4, of Harris Township, is a believer. When asked what he wanted for Christmas, he at first said "nothing," but some gentle coaxing got him to whisper his wish to Santa. (Staff photo by Darlene Wroe)

City wants back in to rural immigration pilot

Diane Johnston
Speaker Reporter

TEMISKAMING SHORES – To put a local twist on an old political catchphrase, Temiskaming Shores wants in.

To be more precise, city council is lobbying to get back in to a pilot project trying to attract immigrants to fill labour needs in rural and Northern Canada.

In June, Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada (IRCC) announced that 11 communities across Canada would take part in the new Rural and Northern Immigrant Pilot.

Northern Ontario's five largest centres – Sudbury, Timmins, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay and North Bay – were included.

At that time, the region to be served by the North Bay project stretched south to Burk's Falls and north to Kirkland Lake.

But the federal department has recently confirmed that the project will initially be restricted to the area within 45 kilometres of North Bay. Businesses outside that area, including Temiskaming Shores, would not be able to take part.

The geographic limitation was placed on each of the 11 pilot project sites.

In the case of the North Bay project, the number of immigrants permitted to apply in 2020 was also reduced from the 300 in the original proposal to 100.

Asked about the reason for the change, IRCC spokesperson Nancy Carol responded in an email:

"This is a new model for an immigration program, as it relies on new partnerships at the local level in its delivery. The initial community boundaries for RNIP (Rural and Northern Immigration Pilot) were established in keeping with the principle of starting small and continuing to grow.

"IRCC is applying this principle with all community partners in the pilot to recognize that they are taking on a new role.

"This approach also ensures settlement supports – the key to the retention of newcomers in recommending communities – can be delivered effectively throughout the region.

"After the initial pilot model has been implemented successfully in partner communities, consideration can be given to expanding it, both in geography and the number of newcomers that can be supported."

Tips on falling for healthy aging

TEMISKAMING SHORES (Special/Staff) – It may be more wintry than fall-like, but one of November's formal designations is "Fall Prevention Month."

To that end, the Timiskaming Health Unit and the Stay on Your Feet Coalition – a group dedicated to reducing the risk of falls in older adults – is focusing on healthy aging.

In a news release, the health unit points to research finding that social connections are a fundamental human need.

"The 'loneliness epidemic' can be a significant risk to health as we age," it continues.

It said the risk of social isolation may be even higher in Temiskaming, where much of the district's population is in rural areas and almost one-third of seniors live alone.

The health unit and the coalition offer the following advice to stave off loneliness and stay connected:

- Join community activities, such as a seniors club, a place of worship or a diners' club.
- Volunteer, which helps the community and provides an introduction to new people.
- Use technology – to share photos, have video conversations, join online groups – to stay in touch with friends and family.
- Take a class to learn something new, keep the mind active, and meet new people with common interests.
- Be physically active, which not only reduces the risk of falling but also provides an opportunity to meet people.

• Join the Seniors' Centre without Walls, which enables seniors to use just their phone to meet others to play games, chat about shared interests, or hear from a guest speaker.

Timiskaming Home Support offers the local program. For more information, call 705-672-2254.

Talking about food insecurity December 2

Sue Nielsen
Speaker Reporter

DISTRICT — If you're hungry for information on how food insecurity can be offset, attend the Community Food Program Community Conversation on Monday, December 2, at Riverside Place in New Liskeard from 6 to 7 p.m.

A group of local social service organizations are collaborating to develop community food programming in Temiskaming Shores and Cobalt.

The program is aimed at supporting households struggling with food insecurity.

The working group is comprised of the Literacy Council of South Temiskaming, Centre d'éducation des adultes, Conseil scolaire catholique de district des Grandes Rivières, Community Living South Temiskaming and the Timiskaming Health Unit.

They originally undertook a series of guided discussions where community partners spoke about those living with food insecurity to learn about the challenges of hunger and what to do about it.

The Community Conversation is the next step dealing with setting up a successful food program and what that entails.

Childcare for this event will be provided on site and bus tickets are available for those who need them. Also, a translator will be on site for everyone speaking French or English to be heard and have a voice.

For more information contact Laura Dias at diasl@timiskaming-hu.com or call 705-647-4305 ext. 2265.

Immunization Protects Everyone!

Vaccines have improved the lives of every Canadian. For instance, before tetanus immunization was available, the fear of tetanus hovered over every cut and puncture wound. Older adults will easily recall how frantic parents were to disinfect every childhood scrape to protect against lockjaw and memories of family or friends paralyzed by polio and summers spent in fear. In the last 50 years, immunization has saved more lives in Canada than any other health intervention.

Immunization is necessary for two reasons: to protect individuals and communities. Vaccines protect an entire population by preventing the spread of disease from one person to another... the more people immunized, the less chance there is for disease to spread.

Prevention of infection by immunization is a lifelong process — it does not stop in childhood! Childhood immunization programs have significantly reduced vaccine-preventable diseases among children, but Canada's population has an increasing number of adults who remain vulnerable to these diseases. All adults should be immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, measles, mumps, rubella and varicella. Additionally, adults 65 years of age and older and those with conditions that increase their chances of complications should receive one dose of pneumococcal vaccine and yearly Influenza vaccine.

Thinking of travelling? Be sure you are protected against illnesses such as hepatitis, typhoid, meningitis, yellow fever or Japanese encephalitis depending on where you are going. If you're not sure what you might need and have access to a computer, you can go to <http://www.phac-asoc.gc.ca/tmp-pmv/index-eng.ohp> to learn about any travel advisories that may be applicable.

As you grow, you don't outgrow your need for immunization. Whether you are a parent, a young adult or a senior, talk to your doctor, nurse, pharmacist or local public health office about being up-to-date on your immunizations.

The Temagami Medical Centre and Family Health Team is committed to keeping you as healthy as possible!

Fires in the mind

“The magic is only in what books say, how they stitched the patches of the universe together into one garment for us.”

Ray Bradbury,
Fahrenheit 451

Sue Nielsen

With her help, I renewed my cherished memories of hours spent inside libraries. The books I read as a child, teenager and now as an adult have helped to spark an understanding of people and our world.

I know first hand the way libraries have had to adapt in light of tight municipal budgets and soaring operational costs.

I have always supported libraries and I believe in them.

I find it hard to understand why people in Temiskaming Shores didn't bookmark the closing of the Haileybury Public Library and the Carnegie Library in New Liskeard as a significant loss.

Every community deserves a public library, they are a necessity, not a luxury.

Having said that, the Temiskaming Shores Public Library is working alongside its board of directors and the municipality in putting together a viable plan for a new look library.

In my community, councils past and present have been extremely supportive of library services in the Silver City understanding the power and value of literacy.

I hope reading for pleasure doesn't drop off because funding for libraries has.

There are important factors you can't necessarily measure on a balance sheet.

Having an informed, literate citizenry is perhaps the most important one.

Ever come across a book in the category of “can't put it down?”

Well, for me Susan Orlean's The Library Book is definitely that book.

I cracked the spine of this book last weekend while housebound with a wonky tooth.

Libraries have played an integral part in my life since I was a kid heading up the winding staircase of the Cobalt Public Library, located above the post office. Our friendly librarians Vi Taylor, Glenda McNaul and Ruth Horan greeted me.

The library helped to open a magical world of reading to me.

Wherever I have lived, the first place I headed to was the local library.

I consider my library card one of my most treasured belongings.

The Library Book story centers on the 1986 Los Angeles Public Library's massive fire that destroyed a million books.

It's also about the person suspected of setting the fire, a man named Harvey Peaks.

Orleans ignited my interest in her wonderful tale about the disaster, blazing a trail of understanding of what libraries stand for and how important they are now and for the future.

EDITORIAL

Blind eye

Monday, November 25, was International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women.

We often turn a blind eye when it comes to intimate partner violence. It is the number one call to Temiskaming Victim Services from police in this region. November is Women Abuse Prevention Month. It has to be about much more than wearing purple scarves. Every 2.5 days a woman or child is killed in Canada, often by someone they know who purports to love them, says a Canadian Femicide Observatory for Justice and Accountability report.

According to 2018-19 Temiskaming Victim Services data, the number one call to the agency, serving communities in South Temiskaming, was domestic violence related.

Out of 387 incidents, 209 of them were domestic violence related.

Those incidents include assault (not domestic violence), break and enter, criminal harassment, elder abuse, homicide, human trafficking, robbery, sexual violence, theft/fraud, vandalism and tragic circumstance.

These incidents of violence are reported to police and then police notify Temiskaming Victim Services.

The problem with domestic violence happening at such an alarming rate in our communities is that quite often the violence is directed at women.

Reported incidents of domestic violence of a gender-based nature make up roughly 85 per cent of incidents reported in Ontario.

The term “epidemic” and a health crisis might be appropriate for the level of violence we are seeing in our communities.

It is long overdue for a South Temiskaming strategy involving stakeholders such as police, health care professionals, mental health experts, the court system, victim services and women's groups to create meaningful strategies to reduce or eliminate the level of violence in our communities.

Ending domestic violence would include working with those who harm while having adequate services for those who are harmed by violence.

The conversation to end intimate partner violence has to include sexism, racism, poverty and education.

The strategy and policies created should include violence directed at women, men, children, homosexuals and transgender people in our communities.

We all deserve to live in a violence free world.

City wants back in to rural immigration pilot

On November 5, Temiskaming Shores council called for the geographic limitations to be removed.

Nipissing-Timiskaming Liberal MP Anthony Rota also backs the restoration of the original boundaries.

In a telephone interview November 8, Rota said he has raised the issue with fellow Liberal MPs Paul Lefebvre of Sudbury and Nickel Belt's Marc Serré and with Ahmed Hussen, minister of Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship at the time of the new program's announcement.

"We'll be tackling this one in full force," Rota said.

He said local proponents lobbied to include the entire Highway 11 corridor in the pilot project.

"While we were in the election period, I guess the bureaucrats thought it would be easier to contain it to a smaller area. It may be easier, but it's not the service I'm looking for."

To restrict the pilot project to within only 45 kilometres of major centres shows "a very poor understanding of rural Canada," he said.

PROGRAM

Eleven communities in Northern Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia have been selected for the pilot project.

The intent is to match employers with immigrants who meet their specific labour needs.

If they make a match and it's recommended by local program coordinators and approved by IRCC, the newcomers are fast-tracked through the immigration process and are on the path to permanent residency.

The North Bay project is led by the North Bay and District Chamber of Commerce.

It's already attracted interest, said Patti Carr, the chamber's vice-president of policy and communications and project lead on the immigration pilot, earlier this month.

Carr said she's been contacted by almost 1,300 prospective applicants from around the world.

That number does not include newcomers who are currently employed in the region on work permits and would be eligible under the pilot project, she said.

She disagrees with the reduced scope of the program.

The chamber had drafted its application for the pilot project after talking to businesses as far away as Kirkland Lake and Burk's Falls about their labour needs, she said.

She said those needs are wide-ranging, from pilots, aviation technicians and very specific trades to managers, health care workers and cooks.

Program details including the smaller scope were released in August, she said.

"I fought with them for about two months trying to get them to understand what our geography is here," she said.

But she said the department was trying to get a brand new program in place prior to the election and ensure its success.

"At the time, they were saying, 'this is not forever, we will open it up.'"

She said officials may not have understood that the settlement services provided to newcomers by the North Bay and District Multicultural Centre extend north along the Highway 11 corridor.

The settlement piece is crucial to the program's success, she said.

"We want to make sure that they're comfortable and that they stay," she said.

Nor will the pilot program be "the be-all and end-all" for businesses searching for the right immigrants to fill their needs, she said.

She said she can refer businesses to other programs that may suit their needs.

She stressed that the pilot program is for economic immigrants, who have job offers and the financial resources to get to Canada and sustain themselves as they settle into new communities.

Businesses receive no incentives for the new hires, she said.

Cobalt planning a Christmas season event

Darlene Wroe
Speaker Reporter

COBALT - Cobalt has put plans in motion to have an evening of celebration for the Christmas season.

The lighting of the lights at the cenotaph park will be a central part of the event which likely will take place in early December.

The Golden Age Club has also advised that it would like to be part of the Christmas celebration, and host a visit with Santa Claus at its hall on Argente Street.

In recent years, Cobalt's Christmas celebration has been centred around the visit of the Holiday Train provided by Ontario Northland.

Communities have been advised the train will not be making the rounds this year.

Plans for a Christmas season celebration were discussed at the town's committee-of-the-whole meeting November 5.

Councillor Matthew Johnson, who was involved with the group that cleaned up the cenotaph park last year and cut back some overgrown plants there, commented that the strings of lights in the park are "not in good shape. A number of strands and bulbs are broken."

Councillor Angela Adshead suggested the town should purchase new higher efficiency LED outdoor lights for the park.

Council had been discussing projects which might be suitable for the Downtown Revitalization grant money that the town has been provided by the province, and must be spent by March 2020. Council agreed that it would like staff to ensure if an expenditure on new Christmas lighting would fit under that funding program.

Mayor George Othmer recommended that a time for the lighting ceremony and visit from Santa should be on an evening when other large Christmas events are not planned in neighbouring communities.

Councillor Pat Anderson has been asked by council to coordinate the Cobalt activities, and to check on available dates that will not compete with other area events.

Aviation fuel tax reduction can help the North

EARLTON (Staff) - The provincial government is proposing to reduce the aviation fuel tax from 6.7 to 2.7 cents a litre effective January 1, 2020.

Temiskaming Shores Mayor Carman Kidd, who is chair of the Earlton-Timiskaming Regional Airport advisory board, said that the reduction in the aviation fuel tax will mean "every airport in the North will reduce their fuel prices by the savings in the taxes, so it will make us more competitive with other small airports in the south that pay slightly less for their fuel."

The provincial government made the announcement Wednesday, November 13, and said the reduction in the aviation fuel rate in Northern Ontario will help to lower the cost of living for people in the region.

While that saving cannot be passed on to passengers in Earlton, because the airport does not have air service, it should help to reduce passenger flight tickets for passengers in Timmins, Sudbury, and North Bay, said Kidd.

"Every little bit helps, and makes it cheaper for our airport users," he commented by email in response to a question.

Lockdown shows need to also contact daycares

Darlene Wroe
 Speaker Reporter

ENGLEHART - While child care centres in Englehart did enter lockdowns along with the three Englehart schools on November 11, concern has made its way to the table of Englehart council about the protocol for communicating with the schools and centres.

Deputy Mayor Jerry Mikovitch noted the concern at Englehart council's committee-of-the-whole meeting November 13.

Jason deLeeuw of the board of directors of the Englehart and Area Child Care Centre, who was present at the committee-of-the-whole meeting, commented that a concern was expressed by a childcare supervisor that the daycare was not notified directly when they could come out, and released the children based on the fact that other children in the school were leaving.

DeLeeuw commented that the concern of the daycare centre is what would happen if a situation deserving of a shutdown would happen during the summer when school is out.

He noted that there are also other childcare facilities in the town that are not attached to the schools.

"They need to be notified when a situation like this happens," he said.

There are also unlicensed daycare centres in the town, he added.

"Somebody could have got their child and have been walking toward the incident."

Deputy clerk-treasurer Malorie Robinson pointed out that the unlicensed childcare centres are not under the jurisdiction of the District of Timiskaming Social Services Administration Board, so their contact information is not readily available.

The Timiskaming Child and Family Services centre is also located in Englehart.

Councillor Jillian Plaunt also questioned if the Englehart Public Library should be notified if a lockdown situation arises, because there might be children at the library.

Councillor Twyla Wilson has been asked to raise the matter at the next meeting of the community policing committee which will take place Thursday, December 5.

Plans building for Earlton Winter Festival

EARLTON (Staff) - Winter is here and the thinking caps and toques are on.

Plans are in place for the Earlton Winter Festival which will be held January 31 to February 2.

Among the activities being put together for the event is a winter parade, a skating party, a hockey tournament, a spaghetti supper, a kids' bingo, a virtual talent show, a canteen, a kids' sliding hill, and a snowman competition.

Mayor Jean Marc Boileau, in outlining the activities, noted that people are needed to help look after the activities.

The Earlton recreation committee, the Earlton Public Library, and the Earlton Fire Department will work to bring people together to assist with the event, but more people are needed, Boileau commented at the township's council meeting November 13.

Temagami Country Christmas returns

TEMAGAMI - Christmas elves are scurrying at night along a bush trail in Temagami.

They're not hiding presents, however. Instead, they're checking for burnt-out festive lighting and gaps in the seasonal displays that illuminate the Temagami Country Christmas.

The sixth annual event will run for two nights only December 6 and 7, from 5 p.m to 9 p.m.

Visitors can tour forested paths illuminated by more than 20,000 lights. A myriad of displays, including a unique waterfall of light, will be tucked in around the trees.

They can enjoy a wagon ride, hear some festive tunes, snack on hot dogs and hot chocolate, do a little indoor ice fishing, and warm up by a bonfire.

And there will of course be a chance to visit with the man of the hour, as Santa Claus sets up shop in his own illuminated cabin.

The night-time family favourite will once again be staged at Peacock Woodcraft, located at 21 Industrial Road off the Milne-Sherman Road north of Temagami.

It's staged by Peacock, which manufactures recreational housing and furnishings, and the Temagami Lions Club, with the support of the municipality of Temagami.

Last year, more than 2,000 visitors dropped by, said Lions Club president Brian Koski.

The event's roots can be traced to Southern Ontario, where Peacock Woodcraft began. It established a drive-by display of Christmas lights that drew a steady parade of motorists.

The business relocated to Temagami and, in 2014, worked with the Lions Club and other organizations to launch a Christmas community display.

Businesses and organizations quickly climbed aboard and sponsored displays. Residents continue to donate lights and illuminated decor to the cause, Koski said.

As for the visitors themselves, he said the 2018 event attracted people from as far away as Kirkland Lake and North Bay.

Admission is free. But organizers welcome donations of non-perishable food, which will go to the Temagami Royal Canadian Legion's Christmas hamper campaign.

Scenes of New France from the 2019 Village Noël

The Santa Claus parade would not be complete without the jolly old gentleman himself. He has returned to the area for another year to hear the wishes of all the boys and girls and bring cheer to all.
