PAYING THEIR RESPECTS

Paramedics taking part in the District of Timiskaming Emergency Medical Services Paramedics' Memorial Bike Ride on August 4 made a special stop on Lakeshore Road in New Liskeard to respect a minute of silence at the site where cyclists Garnett Johnson and Jeffrey Splinter lost their lives in a collision with a city transit bus. Pictured, from left to right, are EMS Chief John McCarthy, paramedics Annette McCarthy, Jon Wright, Eric Begemann and Lucas Gagne. Each year, paramedics across Ontario bike from Toronto to Ottawa to honour the 50 paramedics that have lost their lives in the line of duty. Due to COVID-19, the ride was unable to occur this year. In place of the ride, paramedic services across Ontario have been hosting the Paramedic Memorial Bell and moving it across Ontario, with a final planned destination to end in Ottawa. The local ride began at city hall in Haileybury before making stops in New Liskeard, Earlton, and Englehart before concluding at the EMS base in Kirkland Lake. Police searching for missing man

LATCHFORD (Staff) – Police are appealing to the public for help in locating a missing Pickering man.

Temiskaming Ontario Provincial Police were contacted July 20 about Raymond Chan, 60.

Police say Chan embarked on a cross-country hike late last year and was last seen in the Latchford area in December.

In a news release, the OPP said Chan’s family and police are concerned for his well-being.

Chan is described as 5 feet 9 inches in height and 150 pounds in weight, with black hair.

Anyone with any information regarding his whereabouts is asked to contact the OPP, at 1-888-310-1122.

Callers who wish to remain anonymous can contact Crime Stoppers, at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS), where they may be eligible for a cash reward of up to $2,000.

ON THE SMALL SIDE

Leonard Bowins of Latchford (pictured here) and his son-in-law Faron Montgomery of Meaford, said the day was hot but fun as they participated in the July 19 Temiskaming Smallmouth Bass Series Tournament on Bay Lake in Latchford. They were unsuccessful in hauling anything they could enter, though. Their catch included four pike and this 11-inch bass, which was under the required size. It was returned to the lake, as are all fish caught in the series. (Staff photo by Darlene Wroe)

Fall Fair will crown Harvest Queen online

The Fall Fair weekend is September 10-12.

The New Liskeard Fall Fair is the largest of its kind held in Northeastern Ontario with upwards of 10,000 people attending from all across the north.

This year, due to COVID-19 pandemic restrictions, the Fall

Fair is going virtual for the first time and organizers are excited about the possibilities of this event.

The pageant has been one of the most popular events held during the Fair where 500 or more people pack themselves into the Horne Granite Club to see who will wear the sash and crown of the Harvest Queen.

Graydon is looking for contestants for the pageant and will take a maximum of 15.

She says the virtual Harvest Queen Pageant will include the talent show, fashion show, photos of individual contestants and voice vignettes on the radio with judges performing their usual difficult job of coming up with three finalists.

The three finalists include two princesses and the Harvest Queen.

In 2019 the pageant crowned Harvest Queen Darby Durrant, first princess Alexandra Little and second princess Rebecca Carlson.

The pageant will be completed by video and presented on Fall Fair weekend, noted Graydon.

“This will be an exciting and fun Harvest Queen Pageant so be sure to get your name on the list so we can get started right away,” said Graydon.

To enter call Sharron Graydon at 705-647-8005 or email sharrongraydon@gmail.com.

Food producers thinking outside the box, in the box

Diane Johnston
Speaker Reporter

TEMISKAMING SHORES – Among the enterprises facing an uncertain future as Ontario moved into lockdown in mid-March were farmers’ markets.

So too were the growers who supply the markets and the customers who count on them for local food.

The COVID-19 pandemic spurred two vendors at Riverside Farmers’ Market to try a new business model – community-supported agriculture (CSA).

The owners-operators of Garden Pleasures in Harley and Marsh and Meadows Farm (with farms in Kerns and Henwood) now have more than a month of CSA delivery experience.

And they’re both contemplating expansion. In the classic CSA model, customers pay at the beginning of the season for regular deliveries of locally grown foods.

The revenue offsets producers’ up-front costs as they prepare to plant. In return, customers pick up boxes of in-season foods from plant. In return, customers pick up boxes of in-season foods from

A new community-supported agriculture initiative at Garden Pleasures has drawn 70 clients who pick up boxes of in-season produce on a regular basis. “It’s been going well,” said Bev Brubacher, who with her husband Ross launched the new approach to local food sales this year. Food producers thinking outside the box, in the box early summer through fall.

The two local CSA newcomers have tweaked the approach to suit their customers and their operations.

GARDEN PLEASURES

At Garden Pleasures, Bev Brubacher said her husband Ross had suggested a CSA some time ago.

She'd been less enthusiastic, because customers wouldn't be able to select the specific produce they wanted.

But she agreed this spring to give it a try.

With COVID-19 leaving traditional farmers' markets in question, "we felt there was still a need for local veggies in the community," she said.

They'd hoped that 40 customers would sign up for an 18-week season. They're currently at 70, drawing from as far away as Earlton, Elk Lake and Haileybury.

They offer a box suited for one or two people, and a larger box designed to feed three or four. Customers pick up their boxes at specified times on Wednesdays at Leis Landscaping on Highway 11 and at Co-Worx in downtown Haileybury.

She described the timing as "ideal" – the Brubachers pick produce for the CSA boxes on Mondays and Tuesdays, and for the Saturday market later in the week.

And while she'd worried that customers would miss choosing their own produce, she said the element of surprise in the weekly box has been a hit.

"The challenge is to have an exciting box every week," she said.

While produce is now "bountiful," she said little was available in late June other than early greens and green onions.

She has supplemented the boxes with products from other local growers. She also includes samples of less familiar vegetables and includes a recipe, adding "a little personal touch."

For producers, she said the CSA lets them better plan what they'll raise, with the knowledge they'll also have a customer for it.

Customers too can learn about the risks facing agricultural producers.

"We do our best," she said. "But they have to be understanding if there is a crop failure."

MARSH AND MEADOWS

Christine Harrison suspects that the pandemic has provided "a bit of an awakening" as to the complexity of the food supply chain and the importance of local foods.

Harrison and her partner Vic Galley raise certified organic produce and meats on Marsh and Meadows Farm.

Amid news reports of abattoirs closing because of virus outbreaks among workers, she said people were driving to their farm hoping to buy meat.

This is the first year, she said, that she ran out of chicken.

Labour shortages and virus outbreaks among temporary foreign workers in Southern Ontario fruit and vegetable farms have also sparked concerns about potential shortages and higher prices.

The short-term disruptions demonstrate that "it actually takes quite a bit for you to have food here all the time," she said.

The farm is a weekly vendor at the Riverside market, where Harrison sits on the board with the Brubachers.

Even after markets got approval to open, she said vendors weren't certain whether the public would turn out.

(People have, she said, and vendors "really appreciate the support.")

She'd contemplated launching a CSA a couple of years ago, but shelved the idea when other career obligations came up.

However, she said some of their regular customers hadn't forgotten.

As pandemic concerns grew this spring, she said some older customers who were apprehensive about venturing out in public asked her about food delivery.

When she spread the word, her initial list of eight interested customers quickly doubled to 16. Younger families make up about half.

She's had to turn down later requests because she wants to ensure the farm has enough product to satisfy demand.

It was difficult to source some seed this year because of skyrocketing demand from home gardeners, she said.

That's one reason why Marsh and Meadows' CSA is following

When the pandemic hit, there were questions over food supply and shopping habits. When some of Marsh and Meadows Farm's regular customers asked about a CSA, Christine Harrison, left, and Vic Galley launched a small, weekly food delivery operation in addition to the farm's presence at Riverside Farmers' Market. Coleman Township has new CAO

COLEMAN TOWNSHIP (Staff/Special) - Patrick Cormier has been appointed to the position of chief administrative officer for the Township of Coleman.

PATRICK CORMIER

Coleman said that, "Council is confident that with the combination of his qualifications, education and experience that Patrick will be an asset to the Township of Coleman."

"The Mayor, Council and municipal staff are looking forward to working with Mr. Cormier as they continue with their long-term plan to expand, maintain and enhance the Township of Coleman."

Cormier stated, "I'm very excited to be joining Coleman Township and really looking forward to working with staff, Mayor and Council."

Cormier began work at the township office Tuesday, August 4.

"Cormier brings more than 15 years of municipal experience to his new position as he has been employed by both the City of Temiskaming Shores and the Municipality of Temagami. His most recent duties were as the capital projects administrator with the Temagami First Nations," the township stated in a press release announcing the appointment.

Cormier resides in Temagami with his wife Quellia and their three children.

a pay-as-you-go model, with prices varying according to what's in season.

Paying by the box "takes the pressure off of us a bit," she said.

And given the number of clients, the farm can deliver to their homes.

They also tailor boxes to meet clients' specific requests.

Customization adds some work, she acknowledged.

But she discovered that some clients who had tried a CSA in the past discontinued it because it lacked flexibility.

"We wanted to make sure that, first of all, people were happy with it, and, second of all, that we knew we could supply it and support it."

They've also showcased other local products, such as haskap berries, honey and maple syrup, "to make the box more interesting."

As an added touch, every box includes a bouquet of fresh flowers grown by her mother.

"People just love it," she said.

Harrison said she's added less common garden offerings, such as lemon balm herb, with recipes. She's also included products, such as a chive blossom vinaigrette, to show how a plant can be used through all stages of growth.

She hopes to introduce consumers to the range of foods produced in Northeastern Ontario, and how to use them.

With that knowledge, "they'll come back and ask for it again," she said.

NEXT SEASON

Harrison hopes to expand Marsh and Meadows' CSA clientele to 20 boxes next year.

A stable client base will help the farm plan for the 2021 season, she said.

If pandemic restrictions permit, she said it's considering making the market the pick-up location for boxes, with clients able to select some of their favourites on site that day.

The Brubachers, meanwhile, are so heartened by the response that they plan to launch a CSA meat box this fall offering a variety of beef cuts and chicken over a four-month period.

COVID-19 had also hit the livestock side of their operation.

She said they couldn't ship animals for processing as planned when outbreaks at a couple of large meat processing plants caused bottlenecks throughout the entire system.

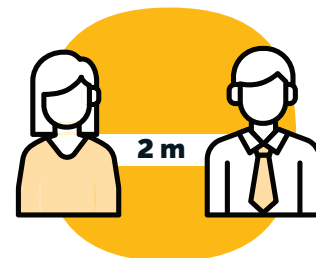

There is a demand for meat in the immediate area, she said.

For customers, a CSA offers "peace of mind knowing where your food is coming from," she said.

She plans to survey CSA clientele later this year to see what they liked and what they'd change.

"If we have happy customers, we are definitely interested in doing it again."

As more businesses and services reopen, we must all continue our efforts to protect each other.

Hilliardton Marsh welcomes visitors again

By Jamie Mountain
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

HILLIARDTON – The Hilliardton Marsh Research and Education Centre welcomed visitors once again this week.

After having their gate closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Marsh now has set up an online booking system that will allow guests to book a short, one-hour visit any day except for Sundays during the month of August.

The first of the visits to the Marsh started on Monday, August 3.

The Marsh will host one group per day between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. Groups are limited to 10 individuals, which should suit most social bubbles.

The visits will consist of a 30-minute bird study session, at which time masks are required. That will be followed by a 30-minute self-guided tour of the Marsh’s pond cells and garden areas.

“We have only had one group so far, but several more have booked and we are looking forward to hosting them as well,” Joanne Goddard told The Speaker in a Facebook message.

“Online (booking) has gone very smoothly and people sound positive about having the opportunity to visit us again.”

She says that they typically host a very casual, more hands-on visit, so this has been “very different for us in that way.”

“The first few days of banding research have been really busy,” said Goddard.

“Lots of birds, and we have a very small research crew this year because of COVID, so it is challenging for sure!”

The visits have also timed perfectly with the launch of the Marsh’s new website.

To book a visit or to find out more information, you can visit the Marsh’s website at thehilliardtonmarsh.com.

Bruce Murphy, Coordinator of Research and Education (at left) and Joanne Goddard explained some interesting tidbits about the birds that the Hilliardton Marsh Research and Education Centre banded on August 4. The Marsh has been welcoming the public once again for one-hour visits, which can be booked online. (Staff photo by Jamie Mountain, LJI reporter)

Overdose Awareness

An overdose means having more of a drug (or combination of drugs) than your body can handle. All drugs can cause an overdose, including prescription medication. It's important to know the right amount and the right time to take your medication. It's also extremely important to know what drugs should not be mixed, and to get help if you feel you are not in control of your drug use.

Depressants and Opioids

A depressant is a drug that slows the vital activities of the body including breathing and heart rate. Depressants may also be known as sedatives. Opioids (such as heroin and pharmaceutical opioids like hydrocodone), medications like Xanax or Valium and alcohol all slow the central nervous system to produce a calming effect. When taken in large amounts or in combination with other medications and/or alcohol, these medications can weaken normal functions like breathing and lower heart rate until breathing and heart rate eventually stop, resulting in death.

Alcohol

Usually people don't think of alcohol when they think of an overdose, but alcohol is a depressant and it is possible to overdose on it. Acute alcohol poisoning, usually a result of binge drinking, is an example.

If you drink a large amount of alcohol quickly, the level of alcohol in your bloodstream can become dangerously high. Alcohol poisoning could stop you from breathing, stop your heart or cause you to choke on your own vomit.

Stimulants

It is possible to overdose on amphetamines. Adderall and Dexedrine are both examples of prescription stimulants. Amphetamine overdose increases the risk of heart attack, stroke, seizure or drug-induced psychotic episodes.

When to Call an Ambulance

Seeking emergency help isn't just for when someone is unconscious. You should also seek help when someone is:

- Having a seizure
- Experiencing severe headache
- Experiencing chest pain
- Having a hard time breathing
- Extremely paranoid, agitated and/or confused

It is not necessary for someone to have all of these signs or symptoms for them to be overdosing. Showing signs of one or more could still mean they are in trouble and need emergency help.

Always call an ambulance if you suspect someone has overdosed!!

LIVE, LOVE, CAMP!

BUCKE-ROO CAMPING

By Robert Ritchie

Camping during week 3 of stage 3, campers and visitors must still follow the medical experts, but it seems to be getting more normal to social distance, mask up and wash your hands after touching anything.

Camping in Temiskaming gives many opportunities to meet new people and make new friends, from local people to people as far away as Thailand and the Philippines. People are people when it comes to camping and campground owners and managers both offer a helping hand to new visiting campers and also offer their knowledge of local attractions that are visually spectacular like Devil's Rock, whether it's from the water or from the top. It's one of Temiskaming's wonders that offers tourists something to remember and share with family and friends.

Many campers are also boaters enjoying both the land and the water that mother nature has to offer. In a weekend I've seen campers bring their kayaks and paddle the shores and cross the water to the islands and back to the campground, then take out their bikes & follow the road to Dawson Point and back to the campground, then relax with a game of croquet. The next day, put their hiking boots on to venture out to Devil's Rock doing both the A and B trails. In the afternoon they would relax with a game of botchy ball in the grassy playground then cool off with a swim at the sandy beach. Obviously for some campers keeping busy is their way of meditating in Temiskaming's great outdoors.

Camper repairs as well as boat repairs are best left to the experts that make it their profession. Some repairs in boats are like RVs, where they both have DC circuitry running many of their appliances and instruments. Boating repairs can be especially tricky if the boat is left in the water during the repair, tools could be dropped in the water, a wave may suddenly give the boat a sudden tip one way or another. So, when your doing repairs to your boat on the water, hand tools are best, especially when it comes to saws.

So, stay active Temiskaming campers, follow health expert's advice and stay safe.

Ils seront mon peuple, je serai leur Dieu ». Tél : 705-672-3296 / Adresse : 341 Sutherland Way, Haileybury, ON
