

Library offering radon detectors

TEMISKAMING SHORES (Special/Staff) – Canadian winters lend themselves to indoor activities and, unfortunately, the potential for exposure to radon gas.

Temiskaming Shores library cardholders can now borrow radon detector kits to measure the level of the gas in their homes.

“The screening devices will give users an idea of the levels of radon in their living areas so they can take action to mitigate the risk,” said library CEO Rebecca Hunt in a news release.

“Further, long term testing should always be done to confirm the results of the screening device. Testing is done in the winter, during the heating months for more accurate results,” Hunt continued.

Health Canada identifies radon – an invisible radioactive gas produced as uranium breaks down in soil and rock – as the leading cause of lung cancer in non-smokers.

It says exposure to high levels of radon gas in indoor air increases the risk of developing lung cancer. The risk depends on the level of radon and length of exposure.

In the outdoors, radon dilutes quickly and is not a concern.

“However, in enclosed spaces, like homes, it can accumulate to high levels and become a risk to the health of you and your family,” Health Canada advises.

It said gas can enter a home anywhere it finds an opening, such as cracks in foundation floors and walls, gaps around service pipes, support posts, window casements, floor drains, sumps or cavities inside walls.

Concentrations can vary between adjacent houses, even if they’re of similar design, it said.

“According to Health Canada, 16 per cent of all lung cancers are caused by radon exposure, resulting in over 3,000 deaths per year in Canada,” Hunt said.

“The library is happy to be able to provide the screening devices in our community to raise awareness of this potential health hazard.”

The library has three kits available. They include the detection device and a brochure outlining its use and facts about radon and home screening.

They can be checked out for free by any library cardholder over 18 and in good standing. If the devices are lost or damaged, the replacement fee is $150.

Survey finds renovating may be better than selling

DISTRICT (Special) - Current economic conditions are having a substantial impact on Canadians' home renovation plans in the year ahead.

In a recent study commissioned by FinanceIt Canada Inc., the survey of Canadian homeowners found that 39 per cent cite affordability challenges as the reason for postponing their renovation plans for anywhere from one year to indefinitely, with this sentiment rising to 48 per cent for younger respondents aged 18-34.

"It's no secret that Canadians are continuing to be mindful of spending as rising interest rates and financial uncertainty are felt across the country," says Michael Garrity, CEO of FinanceIt.

"It's not surprising that younger Canadians, who likely have less disposable income than their older counterparts, are being impacted at a greater rate."

As many as 90 per cent of the merchants interviewed have reported an expectation of business volume fluctuations, as consumers become hesitant to spend.

Looking ahead to 2023, alongside increasing financial hesitations and concern, the home improvement sector is anticipated to be influenced by housing market activity. Higher interest rates that have accompanied inflation have meant that engaging in the housing market might not be viable for some Canadians. This may make renovating the home, rather than selling it, a potentially more attractive option for some.

The survey also found:

- Only 23 per cent of Canadians are aware of financing that is offered directly through a home improvement contractor.

- About a quarter of Canadians would prefer an easy application process when securing financing, even if it means a slightly higher interest rate.

- 23 per cent of Canadians are not overly concerned about interest rates related to financing their home renovation projects, so long as their monthly payments are affordable.

OBITUARY

Lynn Gould

In loving memory of our dear Lynn...

With the heaviest of hearts, we are deeply saddened to mourn the passing of our loving grandmother, mother, sister and friend Lynn Gould on January 9, 2023, in her 77th year.

Lynn was born in Haileybury, Ontario, to the late Phyllis St. Denis.

Lynn had a love for the simple things in life. She cherished her time with family and friends and was always willing to share a good recipe, her homemade preserves or her hand-knitted dish cloths, mittens, and toques.

She was an eternal optimist and no matter what challenges life presented she faced them with a fierce determination. Wherever she went, Lynn spread love, joy and positivity.

She will be lovingly remembered by her two sons Darren (and Jessica) and Doug (and Denise); and her grandsons Mitchell, Jacob and Hayden.

Lynn will be dearly missed by her sisters Denise Sopha (Dando) and Lisa Sopha (Cowley) and Dave; and her brother Mark Sopha and Guylaine; and was sadly predeceased by her youngest sister Holly Sopha.

Tremendous thanks to the PRHC Intensive Care team that lovingly looked after Lynn until she was ready to be with the angels.

In keeping with Lynn's wishes, cremation has taken place and a celebration of her life will take place at a later date in Cobalt, Ontario.

As expressions of sympathy, donations to the Historic Cobalt Legacy Fund through The Temiskaming Foundation website (<https://temiskamingfoundation.ca>) in memory of Lynn would be greatly appreciated.

Condolences accepted at www.ashburnhamfuneral.ca/community-alternative-obituaries.

Physical Activity and Mental Health

The Canadian Mental Health Association estimates that 1 in 5 Canadians will experience a mental health crisis or be diagnosed with a mental illness. By age 40, that ratio increases to every 1 in 2 Canadians. While the benefits of physical activity on physical health are well known, being active can also be an effective pathway to good mental health.

According to the World Health Organization, mental health is "a state of wellbeing in which an individual realizes his or her own abilities, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively and is able to make a contribution to his or her community". The fast pace of modern life can sometimes throw off our mental balance, which is why it's important to find simple and effective strategies to keep it steady. Physical activity is one of them.

Although you won't often see "more physical activity" written on your prescriptions, it's often recommended as a way to counteract and manage many diseases. Mental illnesses such as depression and anxiety are no exception.

Regular physical activity can help:

- Boost your mood and energy levels.
- Inspire a feeling of pride, self-esteem and general wellbeing.
- Improve your ability to concentrate and accomplish day-to-day tasks.
- Reduce your stress and improving your ability to manage it.
- Help you get better-quality sleep.
- Additionally, if you are living with mental illness, including exercise in your daily routine can help reduce your symptoms and help you cope.

The Ideal Level of Physical Activity

You don't have to become a top athlete to see the benefits of physical activity on your mental health. Getting moderate-intensity (and especially aerobic) exercise for at least 15 to 30 minutes a day can be enough to see changes in your mood and wellbeing. That said, if you feel like you can and want to do more, go for it! Just remember that if you have a chronic illness such as heart disease, it's best to talk to your primary care provider before starting a more intense exercise routine. It may also be a good idea to seek help from a qualified personal trainer.

Making physical activity a priority is an easy and accessible way to take care of your health and wellbeing, including your mental health.

EDITORIAL

More health care options

The provision of health care in the province of Ontario is a complex issue.

It involves governments, health care professionals and ordinary citizens to make it work.

For ordinary people living in the north, who perhaps don't have a doctor and have been waiting for a surgical procedure for months, if not years, health care in the province would seem to them inadequate.

Premier Doug Ford has just announced that Ontario will be expanding the use of private, for-profit clinics to perform limited sets of procedures and tests. Cataract surgery, hip and knee replacement surgeries and diagnostic testing will be offered to the general public at private clinics.

Ford says all patients need to do is show up and present an OHIP card to receive these important health care procedures.

But what about the hidden costs of those procedures?

Nursing unions claim private clinics will rob the system of nurses, thus hurting hospitals, long term care homes and other places nursing services are offered.

Here in the north many people do not have access to a family doctor so expediting surgery options is a good move.

We hope this new government plan to move from the current status quo of health care provision is going to work.

But we must ask ourselves: what are the side effects of this private health care option?

Perhaps there is one thing we can all agree on and that is that while people wait to get a family doctor and are on wait lists for surgeries, there is tremendous suffering taking place.

If our current health care system is ending in death and suffering, as we know it is, then change is badly needed.

If Ford is able to get some hips and knees replaced and end peoples' suffering with his new policy, then bravo.

We just hope the Ford government's new health care promises don't go down the rabbit hole like the promise to return passenger rail service to the north via the Ontario Northlander.

I promise to do my best

As a child, I reluctantly put on my Brownie uniform and went to Brownies every Wednesday after school upstairs at the Community Hall in Cobalt.

I had to because my aunt Eileen was the Brownie leader. She was Brown Owl, and if my sister and I didn't show up we were in a hoot of trouble.

During our meetings she would bring out three rubber toadstools.

We would dance around them singing our pledge of allegiance: "I promise to do my best, to be true to myself and develop my beliefs. To serve God and the King and to keep the Brownie Guide

Law."

I found it difficult to make that promise to the King each week when we obviously had a Queen.

Years later when I was at the Cobalt Community Hall for an event I was hosting, I found one of the sponge toadstools. A whole host of memories came flooding back to me.

My mother gave us a dime each week to give to the Brown Owl, however, I often gave my dime to Alma Ferris at the Boston Grill for a bag of candy.

If you knew me back then I would much rather have been chasing a ball or running through the woods chewing on a piece of candy than going to Brownies.

Years later my daughter enrolled in Brownies and I became a Brownie leader.

When Whitney aged out of Brownies it was then time for her to move up to Girl Guides.

I gave my word that I would be a Guide Leader but my girl was having no part of it.

She refused to join. "That's your problem mom," she said. "I am not joining."

Anyway, I guess Brownie founder, Lady Baden Powell, might be turning over in her grave upon hearing that Brownies are no more.

The Girl Guides of Canada have changed the name of Brownies to Embers.

Some girls found the name Brownies offensive because the name may be associated with a particular ethnic group.

Evolving with new information is never a bad thing for organizations.

But I have to wonder - what's next? How about the football team named the Cleveland Browns? Will they need to change their name because of "wokism?"

What if an Embers member brings a pan of brownies to a meeting? Would she then be chastised or the brownies thrown out?

What a shame!

Sue Nielsen

If a name change makes one small child feel more accepted then I am all for it.

But let's lighten up and remember the original name for the Brownies came via Lord Baden Powell's sister, who read a fairy tale and suggested young girls could be brownies and helpful to their families and communities.

I believe I was helpful to my community by increasing the cash flow at the Boston Grill each week.

But I will always remember them as Brownies.

Cobalt considering Fitness Centre project

Darlene Wroe

Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

COBALT - Cobalt council is reviewing whether it wishes to proceed with setting up a Fitness and Wellness Centre at the Fraser Building.

The centre would be a small version of the Hoist Room gym at the former arena. The gym was closed when the arena was sold.

A Northern Ontario Heritage Fund grant of $90,360 is being made available to the town, but the town must commit $10,000 to the project.

Town manager Steven Dalley cautioned council that the actual price of setting up the Wellness Centre would likely be much steeper now because of higher prices.

He said to have the proper facilities, the town would need to ensure adequate services at the site, such as an HVAC system, noise control, and electrical.

"Right now that building only has a boiler system so we would need air exchangers," he said.

"There's so many costs involved.... Honestly, you're looking at at least double" the original estimate. He noted that the original application was made in 2021.

Councillor Doug Wilcox noted, though, that when the Hoist Room was operating at the arena the town was breaking even on its costs "and even making a slight profit."

He expressed the hope that if a similar facility were set up "once we had it running it would become self-sustaining."

He suggested the town should consider resubmitting an expanded bid.

"It's something the community has received well in the past. It was much in demand."

He suggested the council should put in an expanded application "and see if there is an opportunity to do it again."

Councillor Angela Hunter pointed out that it was important to the users of the previous facility that the gym was open 24 hours a day. She suggested that the town should try to get some of the former users involved in looking into establishing a new facility, although she wondered if they would come back.

"Obviously they have somewhere to go now."

Anderson pointed out that the previous facility had a separate entrance, which facilitated the gym being accessible 24 hours a day.

The proposed new site at the Fraser Building is not large, it was also noted.

Also, due to insurance costs, there are concerns about having free weights in the new location. Only machines should be used there, it was suggested.

Public works superintendent Aaron Williams noted he has been trained in the maintenance of gym equipment, which he obtained when the Hoist Room was operating.

Tax time is fast approaching for Canadians

DISTRICT (Staff/Special) — Just prior to the busy tax-filing season, the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) is offering tips and strategies for Canadians on how to properly fill out their tax returns to maximize returns.

If you filed on paper last year, the CRA should mail you the 2022 income tax package. You should receive your package by February 20, 2023. Others who want to file on paper can order or download forms online at canada.ca/cra-forms. They can also order forms by calling the CRA at 1-855-330-3305 starting January 24.

The deadline for most Canadians to file their income tax and benefit return for 2022 is April 30, 2023. Because April 30 falls on a Sunday, your return will be considered filed on time if the CRA receives it or it is postmarked on or before May 1. Similarly, your payment will be considered on time if it is received by the CRA or processed at a Canadian financial institution on or before May 1.

CLIMATE ACTION

INCENTIVE PAYMENT

The climate action incentive payment (CAIP) is paid quarterly. If you are eligible, you will automatically get the CAIP four times a year. To receive your payment on April 14, 2023, you and your spouse or common-law partner (if applicable), have to file your income tax and benefit returns (even if you did not receive income during the year), and have them assessed on or before March 24, 2023. If your tax returns are assessed after this date, your payment will be included in a subsequent payment after your returns are assessed.

If you reside outside a census metropolitan area (CMA) and expect to continue to reside outside of a CMA on April 1, both you and your spouse or common-law partner (if applicable) must complete the CAIP section on page two of your returns. For more information, go to canada.ca/child-family-benefits.

FILING ONLINE

Did you know that 92 per cent of returns are filed electronically?

Electronic returns are generally processed within two weeks. However, for paper returns, the service standard is to process them within eight weeks of receipt. If you file electronically and are signed up for direct deposit, you may get your refund in as little as eight business days. If you're registered for My Account, you can also use Auto-fill my return to quickly fill in parts of your return with information the CRA has on file. If you choose to file your return electronically, you will use the CRA's NETFILE service. Visit canada.ca/netfile-software to see a list of NETFILE-certified tax software products, some of which are free.

FREE TAX HELP

If you have a modest income and a simple tax situation, volunteers at a free tax clinic may be able to complete your tax return. Free tax clinics are available in-person or virtually.

FILING HELP

You may be eligible to use File My Return if you have a lower or fixed income. If you are eligible to use this telephone service, you'll receive an invitation letter with the 2022 income tax package the CRA sends you. Starting February 20, 2023, this service will let you quickly file your return by answering short questions through a secure, dedicated, and automated telephone service.

Really bad weather can be really expensive

DISTRICT (Special) - Severe weather across Canada continues to highlight the financial costs of a changing climate to insurers, governments and taxpayers.

Nationally, insured damage for severe weather events reached $3.1 billion last year, according to Catastrophe Indices and Quantification Inc. (CatIQ).

The year 2022 now ranks as the third worst year for insured losses in Canadian history. While the $3.1 billion figure is alarming, no single catastrophic event nor any particular region accounted for the majority of losses.

Unlike 2016, the highest loss year on record, where the Fort McMurray, Alberta, wildfire accounted for about 75 per cent of national losses, 2022 saw disasters from nearly every part of the country.

Noteworthy severe weather events last year include Hurricane Fiona, the Ontario and Quebec derecho, the Eastern Canada late-winter storm, the Western Canada summer storms and the Eastern Canada bomb cyclone.

"Canada is increasingly a riskier place to live, work and insure," said Craig Stewart,

Vice-President, Climate Change and Federal Issues, Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC).

"In particular, we're seeing early signs that property insurance may become less affordable or even unavailable as global reinsurers shift capacity away from riskier countries," said Stewart.

"Now is the time for Canadian insurers and governments to partner on a National Flood Insurance Program to ensure Canadian homeowners remain financially resilient in the face of these growing number and severity of events."
