The deep water people

Temagami originated as an Ojibwe word meaning "deep water by the shore."

The Indigenous people of the area are the Teme-Augama Anishnabai ("deep water by the shore people") who have sought and obtained official recognition of their claim to a large portion of the land to the north, south and west known as N'dakimenan ("our homeland").

Throughout their history of many thousands of years in the region, many important leaders have made their mark in the challenging effort to conserve their land and way of life.

In the 1930s an Englishman by the name of Archibald Belaney adopted the Indigenous lifestyle and took the name of Grey Owl, making it his life's mission to promote wildlife conservation through his books and lectures.

History and nature merge

Latchford offers boundless opportunities to enjoy the natural landscape and also to learn more about the history of the north.

Surrounded by forest, there are numerous trails that provide varied experiences regarding nature and also history.

The town sits on the edge of Bay Lake and the historic Montreal River which cuts through Northeastern Ontario over 220 kilometres.

The quiet waterfront is a favourite place for fishing, swimming, enjoying a picnic and the adjoining playground. There is also a nearby campground.

Visitors can also arrange for a tour of the Latchford House of Memories or the Logging Hall of Fame.

Latchford is proud to be the birthplace of Sergeant Aubrey Cosens for whom the main bridge is named. Cosens was one of 16 Canadians to receive the Victory Cross for his services to his country in World War II.

George Lefebvre's book - A Walk Through Sawdust City - provides a self-guided tour of the area.

The Cobalt Mining Museum offers an extensive insight into the area's history in the early days when about 10,000 people from around the world were on site, digging out silver in a generally unregulated fashion. Silver veins, often close to the surface, were making people rich overnight.

The tales of Devil's Rock

Devil's Rock on the edge of Lake Temiskaming is the doorway to the magnificent countryside of the region known as Lorrain Valley.

Accessed by Silver Centre Road through North Cobalt and two possible foot trails (one about two kilometres long from the road, and the other about twice that length from Bucke Park), Devil's Rock stirs the imagination.

Thought to have inspired the story-telling of Hardy Boys ghostwriter Leslie McFarlane, Devil's Rock is the central piece of many tales, from the times of the Algonquin people who lived in the region for thousands of years and spoke of small manlike creatures who lived among the rocks, or the maiden who flung herself from the top to escape marrying a man she did not want, to the legends of miners who scaled its 300-foot cliff at night with headlamps in search of silver, and the artistic endeavours of artists and photographers alike.

From the height of Devil's Rock hikers can see the far shore of Quebec.

The cliff face is part of the Temiskaming rift valley, and speaks to the ancient geological history of the region, and more immediately, the beauty of Lake Temiskaming.

Haileybury has something special

There's something different about Haileybury.

Settled on the side of a hill overlooking Lake Temiskaming, Haileybury, then known as Matabanick by the First Nation people who used it as a portage place, Hudson's Bay Trader C.C. Farr felt that special something when he arrived there.

He purchased the property extending from the shore and upward over the hill and named it Haileybury after his college back in England.

The silver boom in neighbouring Cobalt bolstered the thriving business community of Haileybury as a centre where deals were struck, ores were analysed, and mansions sprang up.

Lakeshore Road is a good place to find many of those original arts and crafts-style homes (now known as Millionaires' Row), some of which were the first in the region to have electricity.

The museum also relates the town's history of logging, boating and as a centre of justice as the district seat.

Enjoying Haileybury

Today the Haileybury Golf Club is an enjoyable and challenging nine-hole golf course with views of beautiful Lake Temiskaming. In the town's heyday, working class people were not welcome to play at the prestigious golf course. Everyone is welcome now.

The Temiskaming Art Gallery, situated in the city's town hall, has rotating exhibitions with Canadian and regional award-winning artists.

If your angling style is about the journey, then Lady Evelyn is right up your alley. There are no roads in, and getting there is part of the whole experience. You can charter a float plane out of Temagami, or you can opt to have your boat brought over the Mattawapika Dam to enter the lake via the Montreal River at the end of Mowatts landing.

There are several camps that you can pre-book with or you can pack your boat or canoe and stay at any one of the many camping sites along the way. Just don't forget to get your camping permit which can be purchased on-line.

Regardless if you are a avid angler or are looking for a place to go for adventures with your family or friends, Lady Evelyn will not diss-appoint.

From the crystal clear water.... the numerous walking trails....the breathtaking waterfalls.....the shoreline fish fries.....you'll just never beat the peaceful release of the Lady Evelyn.

A tribute to a railway era

The 701 steam locomotive is living out its retirement days holding court in Englehart between Centennial Park and the Ontario Northland station.

The recently refurbished steam locomotive was the last to run the railway in the Temiskaming region in 1957, and now serves as a tribute to that era in the railway town.

Enjoying the days, past and present

Charlton is not only a launching spot for the enjoyment of miles of fishing on Long Lake, it is also a family-oriented community nestled in a scenic and historic corner of Temiskaming.

A public beach includes a playground, picnic tables, outdoor exercise equipment and more. A covered skating rink provides year-round fun, converted to a place for roller-blading, skateboarding and other activities during the summer months.

During the winter months, there are also many opportunities for snowmobiling in the great outdoors.

This historic town has a great story to tell, and was a hub of activity at the turn of the century in the early 1900s. The Great Fire of 1922 destroyed the town, however, residents rebuilt. Charlton's Heritage Centre has preserved the town's jail and courthouse, and now holds many clippings and artifacts relating to the town's history.

The nearby Hill's Lake Fish Culture Station is an educational opportunity for young and old to learn about the work carried out to raise a variety of fish to stock area lakes.

Seasonal adventures include both fishing and hunting.

For winter fun, enjoy ice fishing on the lake or take to the ski-hill with snowboarding and sledging opportunities.

The Larder River, with both rapids and waterfalls, is situated in the Larder River Waterway Provincial Park - a great area to enjoy the outdoors.

Built on gold

The Town of Kirkland Lake has a long history.

Established on the presence of deep levels of gold, Kirkland Lake grew up with the mining industry as the backbone of its families and recreation.

Where there are people who work hard, there are also people who play hard, and Kirkland Lake was that place.

Known for its hockey players who emerged from its ranks over the decades, the town's love of hockey is still strong.

The community also serves as a jumping off point for those who enjoy the outdoors and all it has to offer. The boreal forest, and all its wildlife, are just beyond the edges of the town.

The celebration of its mining history and its Northern heritage can be found at the Sir Harry Oakes Chateau and Museum of Northern History.

Toburn Park near Northern College in Kirkland Lake is a welcoming site where people can picnic and get some insight into what is involved in operating a gold mine.

Notre-Dame-du-Nord sits in a spectacular setting overlooking the beautiful and mysterious Lake Temiskaming.

Trails and waterways offer miles of scenery and adventure.

Lake Temiskaming is the remnant of a Silurian sea, and visitors to the Timiskaming Fossil Centre will find an educational and awe-inspiring look back 400 to 500 million years ago into the ancient past.

Learn about the life of a logger

Learn more about the logging days on area lakes and rivers by visiting Angliers, Quebec.

Climb aboard a tugboat or visit a logging camp to learn how area loggers and tugboat operators lived in the early- to mid-1900s.

The T.E. Draper operated between 1929 and 1972 on Lac des Quinze. Visitors can also tour a logging camp, stop for a picnic outside the museum, or stay for the night in the nearby RV stop-over location or pitch a tent in a nearby campsite area.

Le site historique T.E. DRAPER

Passez par Angliers pour visiter le remorqueur de bois T.E. Draper et l'ancien entrepôt de la CIP. Faites une escale au Chantier Gédéon, ses différents bâtiments reproduisent fidèlement la vie rudimentaire dans un camp de bûcherons des années 1930-1940.

One of the prized attractions in North Bay is its Heritage Carousel. Visitors can also have a tour on the Heritage Railway.
