North Bay 72 fire "being held"

Diane Johnston
Speaker Reporter

DISTRICT – One month after being ignited by lightning, the status of the massive fire known as North Bay 72 has been upgraded to "being held."

"We're not anticipating any growth on that fire given the current and forecasted weather conditions," said Shayne McCool, fire information officer with the Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry.

"So that's very encouraging," he said in a telephone interview yesterday (Tuesday).

The fire was first reported July 8 in the heart of Lady Evelyn-Smoothwater provincial park near McGiffin Lake. It quickly spread northeast beyond the park's boundaries.

It's the largest in the Northeast, listed at 27,285 hectares, or almost 273 square kilometres, in size.

But it hasn't grown in two weeks, McCool said.

Rain in the past week helped contain the fire.

The ministry had also cleared a fireguard – clearing land down to the mineral soil level, with almost no organic material remaining – on the northwest edge of the fire.

McCool said the fireguard was more than 12 kilometres in length and two to three bulldozer blades' in width.

It proved to be "a very effective tool," he said.

"That was helping us consolidate our fire line, to ensure that the fire didn't spread any more."

At the same time, he said firefighters also worked on the ground, applying water to sections along the fire's edge to "reduce the fire's momentum."

Sprinkler systems have been put on cottages and camps in the Mendelssohn Lake and Skull Lake areas.

McCool said they will be considered for removal, given that North Bay 72 is being held.

Meanwhile, several other small fires in and around the park are still not under control.

"We have been monitoring the other fires very closely and we've been utilizing helicopter bucketing as well to action those fires in the event they did become a little more active," he said.

He said the ministry had focused on North Bay 72 because of its potential to impact people and property.

The Temagami Blueberry Festival attracted many people over the Civic Holiday Weekend who have a passion for the wild blue fruit and for the town. August 31 last day for Cobalt Hoist Room

Darlene Wroe
Speaker Reporter

COBALT - Cobalt council has officially approved the closing of the Hoist Room on Friday, August 31.

The decision to close the municipally owned gym was made on the recommendation of staff. The August 31 date would simplify the process of providing refunds to gym users who had prepaid for access to the gym located upstairs at the former Cobalt arena.

Consideration had been given to closing the gym on August 15. A motion to that effect had been approved in the past but with a new date set, the previous motion will be rescinded, Larose told council at a special meeting Tuesday, July 31.

A closed session was later held that evening, at which time council reviewed proposals for the Hoist Room equipment and possible relocation. No decision has been made yet, however.

Prior to the closed session, council voted six to one to officially close the Hoist Room August 31.

Councillor Perry Wuest opposed the decision.

He had requested that the vote on the closure be delayed until after the closed session when proposals were reviewed. He explained his view that council should first look at the proposals before making the decision on the closure date.

Mayor Tina Sartoretto said the proposals would not affect the closure date.

"What we end up doing with the Hoist Room wouldn't change it," she said.

Wuest argued that it was "a conversation we should have after closed session because we will be more informed."

Councillor Sue Nielsen commented that the decision to close the Hoist Room August 31 was to alleviate the staff workload.

"I think we should pass a resolution to close it after August 31," she said.

Wuest responded with a suggestion that the town could "unplug the computers in the front office to further reduce staff workload."

The council moved on with the vote and the decision was approved by the majority.

North Bay 72 fire "being held"

Now that it's being held, "it'll also allow us a little bit more opportunity to use resources on some of those other fires," he said.

In the coming days, he said the ministry will continue to employ infrared scanning to identify hot spots in the Lady Evelyn fire cluster.

Crews will then be able to target suppression efforts on those locations closest to the fires' perimeter, he said.

TEMAGAMI

In Temagami, meanwhile, several fires in the area are all considered under control.

"That's a very good sign," said McCool, explaining that fire officials anticipated no growth in the fires, regardless of weather conditions.

"That's the last stage of control we utilize before we move to calling the fires out," he said.

But before it moves to that final step, he said the ministry wants to ensure the fires are "fully extinguished" before it leaves an area.

A restricted fire zone and travel restrictions remain in place in the area.

A number of provincial parks – including Lady Evelyn-Smoothwater, Makobe-Grays, Solace, Obabika and Sturgeon River – are also closed.

Finlayson Point and Marten River provincial parks, however, have reopened.

Peter Ramsay marks 50 years of practicing law

Peter Ramsay was pleased with a celebration held in his honour at his downtown New Liskeard law office to mark his 50th year as a lawyer. (Staff photo by Sue Nielsen)

Sue Nielsen
Speaker Reporter

TEMISKAMING SHORES — After five decades as a lawyer, Peter Ramsay is still going to the office each day at the age of 81 and loving it.

What amazes most people about Ramsay is he's as strong and hard working as ever.

"Fifty years and you are still looking good, " said Ramsay's friend, Ernie Gravelle, at the July 10 open house held for the New Liskeard-based lawyer at Ramsay Law Office.

Ramsay, a life member of the Law Society of Upper Canada Bar, began his law practice with his father Ralph Ramsay in 1968. His father taught him to work hard and to be objective. He and his son Bill Ramsay, who joined the firm in 2000, currently operate the family law practice in downtown New Liskeard together with lawyer Michelle Lavigne.

The Ramsay family is celebrating 80 years of law practice with three offices located in New Liskeard, Englehart and Kirkland Lake.

He has three children - Jim, Ann and Bill.

"I am very proud of my dad for achieving 50 years as a lawyer. It is a family tradition since his father was also a lawyer for 50-plus years," said Ramsay's son Bill.

"It has been an honour to work with him these last 20 years and I wouldn't give them up for anything. There is no better mentor," he said in an email interview.

Bill said his father is a hard working, practical and fun loving person all at the same time.

Ramsay hasn't looked back since setting the bar high in terms of excellence and his work ethic.

"I will practice law as long as I am capable," said Ramsay as he smiled, shook hands and greeted guests at the open house.

"I wasn't much for court room law, but for a time I was assistant crown attorney as at that time there were no crown attorneys."

What stands out the most in his mind as he looks back over his long career is the fight he led to prevent the sale of the New Liskeard waterfront.

He specializes in non-litigation cases involving real estate (buying and selling), corporate and commercial representation, estate administration and uncontested divorce.

Ramsay is a founding member of the Temiskaming Foundation and a member of Leave A Legacy Temiskaming.

Keep existing curriculum pending new doc: Board ONE

DISTRICT (Staff/Special) – The region's English public school board is expressing its concerns about revisions to Ontario's health and physical education curriculum.

The new Progressive Conservative government has said the 2015 document, which covers sex education, will be replaced by a new age-appropriate curriculum based on real consultation with parents.

The 2015 curriculum's introduction had been controversial. But plans to return to its predecessor have also been widely criticized, with concerns coming from some school boards, teacher groups and others.

District School Board Ontario North East recently weighed in on the debate, and urged that the current curriculum be maintained pending a new one.

It issued a statement July 24:

"It is essential that the government embark on the consultations as soon as possible.

"In addition, it is important to maintain the current health and physical education curriculum until the consultations and revisions to the curriculum have been completed.

"We need clarification from the Minister of Education regarding her expectations of the health and physical curriculum for September 2018.

"We feel it's critical that a focus on students' health and wellness be maintained.

"Our students need the knowledge and understanding of current day realities that they will face.

"We need to help them understand the importance of their online presence and provide ways to ensure that they are safe in this ever changing environment (e.g., sexting and cyberbullying).

"We also believe the expectations of the current curriculum of consent and knowledge of body parts keep our students informed and safe.

"The 1998 curriculum did not consider the above concepts."

The board also urged families, students, staff and community members to share their views on the issue with local MPPs or Education Minister Lisa Thompson.

Ups and Downs

Thumbs up to the spirit of entrepreneurship which continues to be strong in the region.

People are finding a way to cope with economic hardships and challenges by opening their own small businesses. The Speaker attends ribbon cutting ceremonies or new enterprises and is continually impressed by the enthusiasm and determination of owners.

The small business success rate can be daunting. One study says 20 per cent of small businesses fail in the first year and 50 per cent fail after five.

But people keep trying and from their successes we all benefit.

So support your local friend and neighbour and shop locally.

Thumbs up to the candidates in the 2018 municipal election.

It takes courage to put yourself forward in front of everyone in your community and want to serve your fellow citizen for what are little more than volunteer jobs with tremendous responsibility.

A council position is more than just sitting in a couple of meetings a month and those who don't understand that will have a rude awakening should they be elected.

Another thumbs up, this time to the firefighters who have worked tirelessly to protect people and property here in the Northeast and across the province.

What seemed like an imminent disaster around Temagami has, at this time, been quelled, and the work continues at North Bay 72 (the Lady Evelyn Fire Cluster) which at this writing is listed as being held (close to, but not under control), but hasn't grown in the past two weeks.

It's taken tremendous and commendable work and coordination – even at the international level – to manage this incredible situation in this incredible summer.

Diane Johnston

There was an old TV show in which characters selected personal theme songs.

What would be mine? Life is a Highway? The theme from Get Smart? Dead Skunk in the Middle of the Road?

It wouldn't be Joplin's The Entertainer.

Being a good host is one of the many, many skills not in my wheelhouse.

My home is my hovel, and I'm comfortable in it.

It's only when company's coming that I realize my shortcomings and eccentricities.

"Aunt Diane, why have you covered the face of the clock radio?" asked my nephew.

"The light annoys me when I'm trying to sleep."

"But you can't read the time," the silly boy insisted.

"Doesn't matter. I'd have to get to see the clock anyway."

That makes perfect sense, when one needs glasses to read anything smaller than a billboard an arm's length away.

I also consider it perfectly reasonable to keep unopened jars of spaghetti sauce, peanut butter, and mustard in the fridge.

It has more room, after all, than my kitchen shelves.

My kitchen table is more an extension of the counter. I have accommodated three people in the tiny space – one sat, one stood and I perched on the nearby steps.

So, with two old friends coming for a recent weekend, I had to plan, I had to clean, and I had to cook.

My nephew was happy with frozen chicken fingers and fries and potato chips on the side. Easy peasy, to quote Jamie Oliver.

But a visit from non-relatives demands a little more panache.

I have one go-to dish that I'm fairly confident I can prepare and that most people should find inoffensive. (Now there's a review to make any cook proud.)

Meatballs – make 'em ahead with whatever you have on hand, and camouflage any omissions with sauce.

As I pulled the pan from the oven at around 10 p.m., something slipped.

The result was a scene out of CSI.

Half a dozen meatballs slathered in a blood-red sauce rolled around the kitchen floor.

The viscous blend of ketchup, sugar, vinegar and soy sauce spattered the inside of the oven and the wall, oozed on to the just-washed kitchen floor, and splattered me.

By 11 p.m., I'd done a load of laundry and the floor had been washed – again.

I'd also resolved that the second supper of their stay would be takeout.

My friends were making a quick detour north from the Muskokas, where he'd attended a work-related conference at a swanky resort.

On their whirlwind visit, I drove them past fields of golden canola so they could see a little of Temiskaming agriculture.

We dropped by the Riverside Farmers' Market and toured the Heritage Silver Trail.

Lending a Northern je ne sais quoi was the wildfire-scented air.

My friends were gracious, insisting they'd slept better at my place than at the posh resort.

They claimed they liked the meatballs, and did not once remark on the sticky spots I'd missed in my sauce spill cleanup.

When they headed home, they assured me that they'd enjoyed their stay.

They are true friends, generous and kind-hearted – just the sort to lie about my hospitality.

But I can see an upside.

Had they gone straight home from the resort, they may have felt a little let down.

Two days as my guest, and I bet they were yearning for home.

I see a new career.

I could bill myself as "a re-integration specialist, easing the return to daily routine from a holiday high."

It's a little long for a business card, but you get my drift.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

Canada objected to Saudi Arabia's human rights record and our ambassador was expelled. Meanwhile we're selling Saudi Arabia military weapons that could be used for oppression. Is that:

1) Hypocrisy?
2) Two unrelated matters?
3) Our obligation to speak up?
4) A situation where we should keep our mouths shut?

Literacy Council spells out needs for annual bee

Sue Nielsen
Speaker Reporter

TEMISKAMING SHORES — How do you spell the word help?

The Literacy Council of South Temiskaming is hoping people can spell it as they are seeking silent auction item donations and event sponsors for the annual Hilda Fowke Memorial Spelling Bee and Dinner on September 27, 2018.

The spelling bee is the most successful fundraising initiative they undertake to cover shortfalls in their budget.

"We receive funding from the Ministry of Advanced Education and Skills Development, however, we must fundraise in order to provide classroom supplies, textbooks and equipment," said Susan Hughes in an email message.

The Literacy Council of South Temiskaming is a community-based non-profit agency that provides upgrading and training to local adults.

It is noted that 52 per cent of Canadians meet the minimum literacy and numeracy skills, far below what many countries consider necessary for successful participation in society. This leaves 48 per cent of Canadians with limited skills and has a strong impact on Canada's ability to compete in a global market.

If you would like to donate silent auction items or be a sponsor of the Hilda Fowke Memorial Spelling Bee and Dinner contact Susan Hughes at 705-647-4040 or email literacycst@gmail.com.

THU names new medical officer of health

DISTRICT (Special) – After a long search, the Timiskaming Health Unit has a new medical officer of health.

Monika Dutt, a family physician and former medical officer of health in Cape Breton, will take up her post with the health unit in September.

"We are very fortunate to have Dr. Dutt coming on board with her extensive public health background," said Carman Kidd, chair of Timiskaming's board of health, in a media release announcing the appointment.

"Having a permanent MOH/CEO puts us in a strong position to move forward on public health priorities in our district."

The health unit has lacked a permanent medical officer of health (MOH) and CEO since the beginning of 2017, when Marlene Spruyt left to become MOH at the Algoma Health Unit.

In the interim, doctors Alex Hukowich and Glenn Corneil have served periods as acting medical officers of health.

He said Dutt has a master's degree in public health as well as "numerous" additional designations from universities across Canada and the United States.

Dutt is a former medical officer of health in Sydney, Nova Scotia.

She is also a former executive director of Upstream, a national non-profit organization headquartered in Saskatoon and focused on creating healthy communities through better social and economic policies.

As a family physician, she has worked in rural and remote communities, including Wagmatcook First Nation in Cape Breton and for the Sioux Lookout First Nations Health Authority in Northwestern Ontario.

"Dr. Dutt has already toured the area and is very excited to be coming here," Kidd said.

Temagami recognizes Senior of '18

Diane Johnston
Speaker Reporter

TEMAGAMI – Temagami's senior of the year has been active on the trails and in the kitchen.

"His accomplishments are numerous," said Mayor Lorie Hunter as she presented the award to Doug Adams July 26.

But the mayor singled out two for which Adams may be best known.

He's spent countless hours on the trail groomer, making the community accessible to snowmobilers and bringing business to Temagami, she said.

He's also a founder of the wild game dinner hosted by the Temagami and District Chamber of Commerce.

"He dreamed up the idea, an idea which became the event in Temagami in the fall," she said.

The popular annual event turns 26 this year.

Adams moved to Temagami more than 30 years ago. He and his wife Marg operate Northland Paradise Lodge.

The award recognizes a senior "who has contributed and continues to contribute to the life and vibrancy of the community," Hunter said.

IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of Dawson Jibb

April 7, 1986—August 14, 2010

God walked around the Heavens and decided then and there, I need a kind and gentle man I have no time to spare. He must be very special with free smiles to give away, and a sense of humor all can share to brighten every day.

I need someone with a loving touch who has made his family proud, and checked the whole world over and called your name out loud.

May the winds of love blow softly so only you can hear, we will always love and miss you Dawson and wish you were still here...

Loving you and missing you every day

Love Mom, Dad, Colton, Vickey, Chantal and your faithful companion Gus.
